Report of the Certificate Course

The Department of History at STSN GDC Kadiri conducted a certificate course on Pre and Proto History with the participation of 35 registered students. The program aimed to explore the origins of human civilization, covering the period before written records and the transitional phase into recorded history.

Objectives and Aims: The primary objectives were to provide students with a comprehensive understanding of prehistoric and protohistoric periods, examining the evolution of human societies, cultural developments, and technological advancements. The course aimed to foster critical thinking, analytical skills, and a nuanced appreciation of archaeological and anthropological methods.

Outcomes:

1. Knowledge Enhancement: Participants gained a solid foundation in the pre and protohistoric periods, encompassing topics such as the Paleolithic, Neolithic, and Bronze Age, along with the emergence of early civilizations.
2. Analytical Skills: The syllabus focused on developing students' analytical skills to interpret archaeological evidence, allowing them to draw insights into early human behavior, societal structures, and technological innovations.
3. Research Proficiency: The course encouraged students to delve into scholarly research, exploring academic literature, and engaging with primary and secondary sources to deepen their understanding of pre and protohistory.
4. Effective Communication: Through discussions and presentations, students honed their communication skills, articulating their understanding of complex historical topics and engaging in constructive academic discourse.

Procedures:

1. Lectures and Seminars: The course utilized a combination of lectures and seminars to convey foundational knowledge and encourage interactive discussions among participants.
2. Field Visits: Practical exposure was facilitated through field visits to archaeological sites, museums, and research centers, offering students a hands-on experience with historical artifacts and research methodologies.
3. Research Projects: Participants engaged in individual or group research projects, allowing them to apply theoretical knowledge to real-world scenarios and develop research and analytical skills.
4. Assessment: Regular assessments, examinations, and presentations were used to evaluate students' comprehension and application of the course content.

In summary, the Pre and Proto History certificate course at STSN GDC Kadiri successfully achieved its objectives by providing students with a solid understanding of early human history, fostering critical thinking skills, and promoting engagement with historical research methodologies. The diverse range of procedures employed ensured a comprehensive and immersive learning experience for the registered 35 students.

Objectives of E-Governance

E-Governance

- e-Governance can be defined as the application of information and communication technology
- (ICT) for providing government services, exchange of information, transactions, integration of previously existing services and information portals.
- The "e" in e-Governance stands for 'electronic' The Council of Europe referred to e-Governance as:
- The use of electronic technologies in three areas of public action:
- relations between the public authorities and civil society the functioning of the public authorities at all stages of the democratic process (electronic democracy)
- the provision of public services (electronic public services)
- Reasons for Opting e-Governance
- Governance per se has become very complex
- Increase in citizens' expectations from the government
- Different Connotations of e-Governance
- e-Administration: The use of ICTs to modernize the state; the creation of data repositories for
- Management Information System (MIS) and computerization of records (land, health etc).
- e-Services: The emphasis here is to bring the state closer to the citizens.
- For Examples: Provision of online services.
- e-administration and e-services together constitute what is largely termed as e-government.
- e-Governance: The use of IT to improve the ability of the government to address the needs of society.
- It includes the publishing of policy and program-related information to transact with citizens.

- It extends beyond the provision of online services and covers the use of IT for strategic planning and reaching the development goals of the government.
- e-Democracy: The use of IT to facilitate the ability of all sections of society to participate in the governance of the state.
- Emphasis is on bringing transparency, accountability, and participation of people.
- It includes online disclosures of policies, online grievance redressal, e-referendums etc.

Origin

- e-Governance originated in India during the 1970s with a focus on in-house government applications in the areas of defence, economic monitoring, planning and deployment of ICT to manage data intensive functions related to elections, census, tax administration etc.

Objectives

- Better service delivery to citizens. Ushering in transparency and accountability.
- Empowering people through information.
- Improve efficiency within Government i.e between centre-state or inter-states.
- Improve interface with business and industry.
- Pillars of e-Governance
  - People
  - Process
  - Technology
  - Resources
- Types of Interaction in e-Governance
  - G2G i.e. Government to Government
  - G2C i.e. Government to Citizen
  - G2B i.e. Government to Business
  - G2E i.e. Government to Employees
